THE GRAND JURY CHARGES:

OVERVIEW OF THE CRIMINAL SCHEME

At all times material to the indictment:

1. Defendants Rita Martinez (“Martinez”) and Genaro Fuentes (“Fuentes”) are mother and son. The Defendants, along with others known and unknown to the Grand Jury, worked together to traffic and victimize women and girls in Mission, Texas.
2. From on or about 1996 to 2019, Martinez, with the assistance of others known and unknown to the Grand Jury, recruited and brought women and girls from Durango and Coahuila, Mexico, to Mission, Texas.
3. Martinez would tell the women and girls, and their families, that she would bring them to the United States to work at her restaurant or to clean houses. Martinez would then arrange and pay for “coyotes” to bring the women and girls into the United States.
4. When the women and girls arrived in Mission, Texas, Martinez informed them that they owed her a smuggling debt, and that they had to work it off in her bar, located at 7700 W. Mile 7 Road, Mission, Texas (known, alternatively, as “Perez Lounge,” “Rita’s Lounge,” and “Rita’s Sport’s Bar.”).

5. Martinez told the women and girls that they would make money by drinking beers with clients. Martinez claimed that the women could collect tokens for each beer sold to a client, and then she would deduct the tokens earned from the debt that they owed.

6. After some days or weeks after each woman or girl began working at Martinez's bar, Martinez would arrange for clients to take the woman or girl out of the bar to have commercial sex. The clients would arrange for these dates, and negotiate the terms (prices for particular sex acts) with Martinez herself. In her absence, they would negotiate with Fuentes, and others known and unknown to the Grand Jury. Clients would take the women and girls to nearby motels, Martinez's home, trailers behind the bar, or their personal vehicles, to engage in commercial sex.

7. If a woman or girl resisted a client's attempt to engage in commercial sex, the client would complain to Martinez. Martinez would then tell the woman or girl that she had to comply with the client's wishes in order to pay her debt.

8. Martinez used a variety of coercive means to keep the women and girls under her control, and to ensure that they would continue to engage in commercial sex with clients. She saddled the victims with impossibly high debts, threatened to report them to immigration or the police, and warned them about the harm that might come to their families in Mexico. She insulted and humiliated the women and girls. She physically assaulted them, including slapping, hitting, and dragging them by their hair, if they disobeyed her.

9. Fuentes assisted Martinez's commercial sex trafficking operation by driving the women and girls under his mother's control to and from the motels, where Martinez sent them to meet clients, selling condoms to the women and girls, and operating Rita's Lounge in his mother's absence. In his mother's absence, Fuentes pressured the women and girls to engage in commercial sex with clients. Fuentes witnessed his mother assault the women and girls under her control, sometimes encouraging her abuse, and sometimes intervening to stop her. Fuentes would sexually assault women and girls who were newly arrived at his mother's home, telling them that he had a right to try them.

10. If a woman or girl had a small child, Martinez would persuade them to let her send it to her associates or family members, either in the United States or in Mexico, to "babysit" the child while the mother worked at Rita's Lounge. Martinez would limit the woman or girl's access to her child, telling her that she had to work more in order to see the child, and earn the money to clothe and feed it. With the assistance of others known and unknown to the Grand Jury, Martinez took one such child from his mother, placed him with Martinez's family in Mexico, and refused to return him.
